

Greenwood Principal Todd Garrison says, "When our community can come together and provide meaningful career exploration through internship, mentorship and job shadowing programs, it develops career skills and knowledge that our students would not have otherwise gained."

Senior Noah Green shares his experience with a local employer.

High School, Businesses Partner in Greenwood

During the inaugural Partners in Education luncheon at Greenwood High School, more than 60 local businesses came together to learn about the new College and Career Center. They discovered ways local employers could work to build lasting relationships that will benefit the school and business community.

Senior Noah Green – who interned with Johnson Kellie Plumbing, Heating and Cooling – told the audience the company "gave me a wide variety of ways to know what work experience is like through career exposure in different areas of HVAC and plumbing. I also gained a better understanding of the importance of having a good work ethic."

Strengthening Greenwood Community Schools' college and career readiness program is one of the main initiatives being planned through funding the district received from the Lilly Endowment's Comprehensive Counseling Initiative grant. The Indiana Chamber Foundation is providing technical assistance support for the schools.

Stronger connections with business partners will expand opportunities for students to gain practical work experience and help make Greenwood a better community.
